YACHTS

What's New? by CEO Don Finkle: This weekend we will be hosting our annual spring picnic and open house at RCR's Buffalo marina. PLEASE come visit us! Hours will be 11-5 on Saturday and 11-3 on Sunday. Somehow we managed to screw up and schedule this on Mother's Day, but other than that it is the perfect time. Bring mom, she'll love the food, we have plenty of goodies, highlighted by Darren's famous sausages. This year we are adding flea market tables where customers can bring by stuff they want to sell, you are welcome to add to the pile. West Marine will also be on hand to demonstrate some of their exciting new products. Of course we also have some boats for you to look at. Directions may be found on our website. The schooner Spirit of Buffalo will also be docked at the marina this weekend, stop by and have a look.

284 Fuhrmann Blvd

Buffalo, NY 14203

The new Fuhrmann Blvd highway reconstruction outside our Buffalo yard is nearing completion. We will all be so glad when the dust and dirt is finally gone, but it sure is a big improvement. Driving by yesterday I noticed the extensive landscaping they have done on the median and along the sides of the road. I wonder how many of these shrubs will survive the ravages of the deer herd that lives nearby? Yes, we are in the city, but there are loads of deer and they seem to eat everything except fiberglass.

Some of our friends are enjoying the cruising life as this is being written. One family is bringing the boat they bought from us back from Newport, RI on her own bottom.

They phoned me yesterday to say they were in the NY State Barge Canal on their way to Oswego, and eventually to their home port here in Youngstown. The dad thought it would be a good bonding experience to do the trip with wife and two sons, and he said it has been super so far. Hank and Ann have been cruising their 42 foot trawler through the Bahamas, and just returned to Florida for haul-out and some maintenance work before starting to head back north. They will be in New England this summer and we look forward to meeting up with them at some point.

There is a not-for-profit organization in Buffalo named Buffalo Niagara Riverkeeper that is dedicated to the preservation, remediation and improvement of our waterways. They have a small powerboat that will be used for patrol, testing and other duties. RCR is providing them with a dock in our Buffalo marina. The boat is as yet unnamed but you may see it this summer.

We are finding it is not generally known that the sale of used boats works a lot like multiple listings in real estate. Those of us who broker boats for sale share listings between us, and often one broker has a buyer looking for a particular boat and another broker somewhere else has the boat we are looking for. The commission does not change, the brokers just share it, so there is no financial impact on buyer or seller. RCR is doing more co-brokerage deals than ever before, as we match buyers and sellers, regardless of location. Keep in mind that the boats we have listed are only a small fraction of the boats we have available for sale through the networks. If you are looking to buy a boat please see us first and we'll find it for you. This is much better than buying a boat from someone far away who you don't know and who you will likely never see again.

Congratulations to Killian Corbishley, daughter of RCR's Corbo Corbishley and his wife Donna, who just got appointed to the US Naval Academy. She follows Jason Carminati, now finishing his second year at Annapolis, as a former junior sailor from our area who landed this prestigious opportunity.

Wind farms: There is always another contentious issue popping up to worry about, this time it is the proposed wind generator farms that are being considered for Lakes Erie and Ontario. Aside from the aesthetic and navigation concerns, there is also the idea that wind farms cannot be financially viable without subsidy. Here is a thread from Scuttlebutt worth reading on this topic:
<http://forum.sailingscuttlebutt.com/cgi-bin/gforum.cgi?post=9658>

Another looming threat is ethanol in our marine fuel. See the Commentary section below for more details on this subject.

Marine Head De-Stinkum: This stuff sounds pretty good, we haven't tried it ourselves yet but if it works as advertised it would be worth a try:

News & Announcements:

Problems with Ethanol in Fuel, by Tim Booth: "Don, I have been talking with marinas and fuel suppliers. Originally we were told that this would be a non E-10 summer. It now appears that the changeover will happen mid-summer, as early as June in some areas.

E-10 can be a major headache for boaters, both during the changeover and afterward. Getting the water out, and keeping it under control is absolutely critical for boaters. It is a much larger threat for boaters because, unlike their automobiles, boats have open vented fuel tanks that will be absorbing moisture right out of the air.

April 15, ALERT- LAKE ONTARIO, LAKE ERIE

This summer most marine fueling locations will be switching over to E-10 gasoline. Boaters need to prepare for this changeover.

Old gasoline formulations would not mix with water. If you had any water in the tanks it sat at the bottom. Unless it mixed with the fuel on a rough day you didn't know it was there. E-10 will change all that. When that water mixes with E-10 it can cause phase separation, and phase separated E-10 fuel is a real problem. At best your motor will run poorly, at worst it can ruin your engine. Eliminating and Preventing water contamination is the key for happy boating with E-10.

You need to start preparing for E-10 immediately. If you are able you need to remove existing water from your tanks. It is sitting at the bottom where you might have a drain plug. If no drain plug you might be able to siphon the water from the bottom. Remove any water until you see the fluid change color. If you can't remove the water then you need to start using K100 to encapsulate that water. Encapsulated water can't react with the E-10. Use an amount of K100 equal to the suspected amount of water. If you have no idea how much water you have then treat the fuel at the ratio of one quart of K100 per 30 gallons of fuel.

Another cautionary note. E-10 fuel has a much shorter shelf life than the older formulations. E-10 fuel shows noticeable deterioration after 30 days. Most boaters don't turn over their fuel that fast. You need to be adding a stabilizer to your fuel. K100-MG contains an enhanced stabilizer that not only helps eliminate phase separation problems; it also helps to keep fuel fresh.

K100 is not a new formulation. K100 has been eliminating water contamination problems for years. Over on the East Coast we have been helping boaters deal with the E-10 threat for 4 seasons. Major marinas on the coast use K100 as their primary winterizing treatment, and offer it in their marine stores and on the fuel docks. The military uses it to keep their equipment ready to go at a moments notice.

If you have a diesel powered boat, don't forget about K100-MD for diesel fuel. It keeps encapsulated any water to eliminate conditions necessary for microbe growth. It adds much needed lubricity. And it helps to keep injectors clean. Less filter clogging problems, better engine life, less smoke, better performance."

Here is an article from Scuttlebutt on the same subject: This summer, the United States Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) will decide on whether to allow a 50% increase in the amount of ethanol in the nation's gasoline supply, from the current E10 (or containing 10% ethanol) up to E15 (containing 15% ethanol). However, with testing data on the new "mid-level" ethanol formulation to be completed on only a small group of 2001 and newer model vehicles by this time frame, consumers with older cars, boats, non-road vehicles or gas-engine powered equipment may find that the fuel is not compatible or safe for use. -- Read on:
